OPPORTUNITY · LIVESTOCK AND RANGELAND

Livestock and rangeland partners

Managed grazing and a better market for the kraals that share the Zulia foothills.

THE OPPORTUNITY

Cattle and wildlife on the same ground

Karamoja is cattle country, and the herds of the Dodoth have used the Zulia foothills in the dry season for generations. Zulia Conservancy will work with that, not against it: managed grazing on defined blocks of the reserve's western gateway, agreed with the kraals and the National Forestry Authority, and a better market for cattle from kraals that keep the rules.

Managed grazing

Three blocks in the Himan Gateway, grazed in rotation in the dry season under agreements with named kraal associations.

Livestock to market

A buying scheme that pays more for cattle from compliant kraals, with strict provenance checks.

Animal health

Vaccination and treatment days at Himan with the district veterinary service.

Grazing blocks in the Himan Gateway. The summit sanctuary and the breeding ranches stay free of cattle.

WHAT THE AGREEMENTS ASK

Simple rules, kept

- Herds registered, with a named herd leader, and a cap on numbers set from grass monitoring.
- No fire, no charcoal, no cutting of live trees; firebreaks cut before the season.
- Herds in the agreed block, and out of the reserve by the end of April.
- Herders report fires, intruders and wildlife incidents to the rangers.

What we look for in partners

| | |
|---|---|
| Rangeland managers | Planned grazing, grass monitoring and herder training in East African drylands. |
| Livestock enterprises | Buyers, abattoirs and traders who want a steady supply of traceable cattle from Karamoja. |
| Animal-health partners | Vaccination, disease surveillance and veterinary training. |
| Funders | A revolving fund for the buying scheme and support for the herder-scout programme. |
